i remember asking you how you tell a patient that their diagnosis is not great. thats what you and i are dealing with. after years of public service . against all biz advice , you now want to play in the big leagues. it will not happen for 3-5 years. you have gone your own path against advice and now must deal with the consequences. whining will not help. . you are like an alcoholic that complains that they have fatty liver disease. . you need to establish credentials that are respected in the real world. science. best shot medicine nope. politics a firm maybe.

12:05:10 pm

gates can play a role, if you want to do your endovascular then do it. that s i. one thing at a time. time is your limiting currency. otherwise you will do everything half ass.

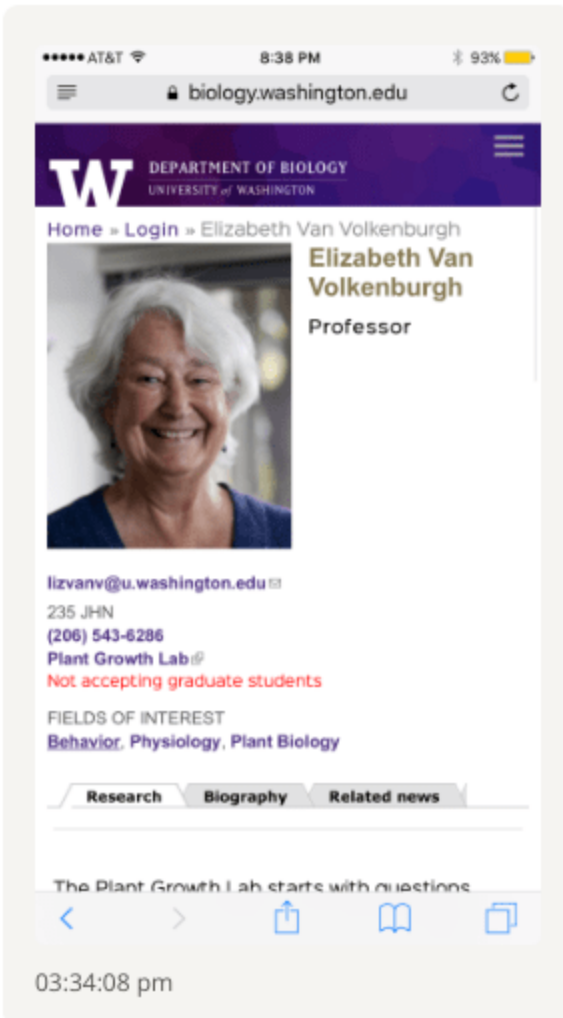

12:06:34 pm

Good thing I've got a great doctor ... thank you for looking out for me.

At least you didn't say that i was dying. Gives me hope!

Lots of catching up on the personal side and from the last 2 weeks or so.

- it's his first week back in 4 weeks and then Thursday Friday is w Federer.

I did learn something interesting in that his dad took Maalox (aluminum!) for a super long time due to bad reflux and maybe some other dyspepsia. And it only came up bc bg says he has to take it almost every night too. Oh no!!!
